

Migrant Voice are disappointed to see the Prime Minister committing to hard-line anti-migrant policies with the re-appointment of Home Secretary Suella Braverman.

We will be working our hardest to show the Prime Minister and his government that what this country needs is an immigration system that works to protect refugees, and treats all migrants with compassion.

We need safe and legal routes, not deportation flights to foreign countries. We need a fair and equitable visa system, not one which benefits from migrants' wallets. But mostly we need to build a society which respects all migrants as a vital part of our community.

With the appointment of the Prime Minister's new cabinet we don't see this happening, but we will continue our work to show the government that there is another way.
